

A Primary Sources

Rumford, Benjamin Count of: An Inquiry Concerning the Source of the Heat Which is Excited by Friction. By Benjamin Count of Rumford, in: Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society of London 88 (01.01.1798), S. 80–102, available online: <http://www.jstor.org/stable/106970>.

Rumford, Benjamin Count of: An Inquiry Concerning the Weight Ascribed to Heat, in: Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society of London 89 (01.01.1799), S. 179–194, available online: <http://www.jstor.org/stable/107032>.

B Secondary Sources

Brown, G. I.: Scientist, Soldier, Statesman, Spy - Count Rumford: –The Extraordinary Life of a Scientific Genius. Stroud (Gloucestershire): Sutton 1999.

Brown, S. C.: Count Rumford: Physicist Extraordinary. Westport, Conn.: Greenwood Press 1979.

Goldfarb, Stephen J.: Rumford's Theory of Heat: A Reassessment, in: The British Journal for the History of Science 10, Ausgabe 01 (1977), 25, available online: http://www.journals.cambridge.org/abstract_S0007087400015090.

Heering, Peter: An Experimenter's Gotta Do What an Experimenter's Gotta Do—But How?, in: Isis 101, 4 (01.12.2010), 794–805, available online: <http://www.jstor.org/stable/10.1086/657478>